In India, Assisi has long partnered with Integrated Development Trust (IDT) in Kancheepuram district and Perambalur Social Service Society (PSSS) in Trichy district. Both partners are not-for-profit organisations registered under the Indian Trust Act, and work to improve social, economic and environmental opportunities for disadvantaged communities. Sr Stella, the founding partner of our work in India, continues to be actively involved in guiding the work of IDT.

In Cambodia, Assisi has partnered with Live & Learn Cambodia (LEC) since 2010. Live & Learn is an international, non-governmental organisation that works on environmental and human rights initiatives. President's Report

"Being a member of the Women's Groups has given us bonding, purpose in life and provided access to financial assistance."

Women's Group participant,
Kancheepuram District, India

Words like these bring home the importance of Assisi's work with women, children and communities.

This financial year, with the help of our generous supporters and partners, Assisi supported over 6,000 people in India and Cambodia. I was fortunate enough to visit our projects in India during February, seeing first-hand the impact of our work and the deep commitment of our partners. It was a huge privilege to meet with Sr Stella, the founding partner of our work in India.

A big focus and achievement for Assisi Aid Projects this year was the development of a new Strategic Plan – setting the course of Assisi to 2020. Developed with input from our partners, staff and stakeholders, our new strategy builds on Assisi's past work to put gender equality and women's empowerment at the forefront of all we do.

Gender equality is an important development outcome in its own right – ensuring rights and equal opportunities for women and girls. It is also vital for broader development outcomes, supporting economic growth, peace and security, and poverty reduction.

Assisi's new strategy sets a vision in which all people have equal opportunity to determine and achieve their economic and social potential. It is based on four goals:

1. Increasing women's social, economic and political empowerment
2. Advancing transformational change in institutional and social norms impacting gender equality
3. Ensuring organisational effectiveness

4. Enhancing organisational and sector learning.

Assisi will regularly track progress against the goals of our strategy and report on this in our annual report.

Undertaking in-depth evaluations of our projects was another key focus this year. The evaluations pointed to the effectiveness and results of our projects, while also outlining recommendations to strengthen what we do. We are now working with our partners and the communities to put these recommendations in place.

I was honoured to take over as President of Assisi this year, having spent most of my career working in and committed to international development. Assisi is a dynamic organisation, built up through the hard work and dedication of many people that continue to be engaged today.

I want to take the opportunity to particularly thank Tony Britt for his tireless work and important contributions to Assisi as President over the past ten years. Fortunately, Tony is still actively engaged in Assisi, remaining as a member of the Committee of Management. I also want to thank Karen Young for her great leadership of Assisi as CEO over the past three years. Our former CoM member, Beth Sargent, is working as our Interim CEO while we recruit for a permanent replacement.

Finally, my sincere thanks to all of our supporters, partners and communities who make our work possible. I encourage you to reach out to others to share the results of our joint efforts and inspire them to become involved.

Delivering Goals 1 and 2: Increasing women's empowerment and advancing transformational change for gender equality

This financial year, Assisi continued to support two projects in India and one project in Cambodia, with a strong and expanding focus on women's empowerment and gender equality. In collaboration with local partners, Assisi supported greater opportunities for women through building education and skills, increasing access to finance, and linking women into community decision-making processes. We also worked with men and children to promote gender equality and provide education and livelihood opportunities.

"Being a member of the Women's Group has given us bonding, purpose in life and provided access to financial assistance from our own Women's Group and People's Bank organised by the project. Our self-esteem has been enhanced, self respect increased and social acceptance is evident."

INDIA

ACHIEVED
THIS YEAR

Supporting single women-headed families

In India, widows, divorcees and single women are frequently subjected to discrimination, negatively impacting their health and exacerbating isolation and poverty. This project aims to improve opportunities for single women-headed families while also working with the wider community to ensure inclusive community development.

33 Women's Support Groups, with 1,162 women across 41 rural villages in Tamil Nadu, have now been established. Over the course of this year, both the new and established Support Groups met monthly, providing a safe space for women to share stories and ideas and participate in a structured education and skills development program.

Literacy classes were held for 76 women. Women also participated in income generation training (123 participants), marketing training (31 participants) and a tailoring course (22 participants).

Women increased their access to finance through income generation activities, access to loans, and savings groups. Together, Women's Groups saved over AUD $18,000 which was provided to women as loans to start businesses. 181 women set up local businesses including tailoring, selling flowers, and agriculture. Twenty per cent of women reported an increase in their income, which has a significant community impact given 90% of project participants are the only income earner in their household.

The project focused on improving family health through 1,056 home visits to provide training and counselling on women's rights, health and hygiene. 51 women participated in additional health awareness training.

Women were supported to understand and access their rights. This included supporting women to access government support services including the widow's pension, disability pension and subsidies for toilet construction. A new community legal centre was also established to support women to access legal rights and representation.

The project also focused on increasing community participation to ensure inclusive community development. Seventeen Village Development Committees (VDCs) were supported to meet monthly to discuss village issues and advocate to government. Women were encouraged to increase their participation, with women now representing approximately 50% of VDC members. Gender equality was promoted through training for community members and the celebration of International Widow's Day.

"The Community respects us, we have become the head of the family and responsible person for the family, we motivate and support our children to study well and go for higher studies."

INDIA

Education and skill development for disadvantaged children

Assisi continued its support for education and skills development for children across 20 villages in Tamil Nadu. This year, the project also included disaster mitigation activities in six villages that experienced flooding in late 2015.

The project targets children from disadvantaged backgrounds including Dalit and tribal groups and single women-headed households. Most of the children are first generation learners and 66% of their households rely on daily labour for income.

In 2016/17, 650 children participated in tuition classes across 20 study centres. Classes were held five nights per week, with average attendance at 75%. Classes built upon the school curriculum, covering life-skills, health, hygiene, gender equality, disability inclusion, environment and English studies. Children participating in the tuition classes performed well at school, with 62% of students passing school exams with a score over 70%.

25 Children's Clubs, with 258 participants, met weekly to build leadership skills and community engagement.

To foster knowledge and interest in child development, 20 Parent's Groups continued to meet monthly. Parents were trained in education, gender equality, child protection, family budgeting, income generation, health and hygiene. Community facilitators also conducted 2,738 home visits to provide further support to families. Many parents took a more active interest in their child's education, enquiring about school performance and participating in school activities.

This year, the project also included income generation activities for parents to supplement incomes and encourage contributions to tuition class costs. Thirty-one parents were provided with business and marketing training and 17 parents went on to start a business. By the end of the year, 23 parents contributed to tuition fees. Five tuition classes have been handed over to Parent's Groups to run and manage, an important outcome for community leadership and the sustainability of the classes.

Disaster preparedness in Tamil Nadu

Floods in Tamil Nadu in December 2015, heavily impacted Kancheepuram District, with damage to infrastructure, housing and sanitation facilities. In response, the project included disaster preparedness activities in six of the most impacted villages. A disaster management committee was established in each of the six villages, and they then worked with local stakeholders to develop disaster resilience plans. Disaster management training was also rolled out to villages. Communities reported using their new knowledge and plans to prepare for Cyclone Vardah in December 2016.

CAMBODIA

Sustainable livelihoods through community empowerment

Working in partnership with Live & Learn Cambodia, this project is increasing livelihood opportunities and community development in ten rural villages across Trapeang Rong and Phat Sanday communes in Cambodia.

The project is supporting community members to develop and manage locally determined projects through ten Community Based Organisations (CBOs). This includes: two Business Groups, two Model Farmer Groups, one Community Based Ecotourism Group, two Savings Club Federation Groups, two Tuition Class Groups, and one Local Governance Support Group.

The CBOs received training in governance, leadership, project development, risk management and financial management. They designed local projects and applied to Live & Learn Cambodia for small grants. 12 grants were awarded for agriculture training, environmental protection, domestic violence initiatives, and sanitation. CBO representatives were also supported to actively participate in commune meetings and advocate to local authorities for community improvement. For example, advocacy to the Department of Fisheries and Environment resulted in changes to fishing net size regulations allowing local people to catch more fish.

The project supported 16 Savings Groups with 333 members including 244 women. This year, two Savings Federations were established to take over the management and coaching of the Savings Groups. The Savings Groups capital has increased 44% from the previous year, with total loans borrowed at over AUD $88,000. Defaults on loans decreased from 7.7% in 2015/16 to 1.5% in 2016/17.

A savings phone app was developed to support Savings Club members to calculate loan interest payments. This app is now being rolled out among the Savings Groups.

This year, both the CBOs and Savings Groups focussed on women in leadership, including training and support to build skills and confidence. Women held the majority of leadership positions in both CBOs (58% of positions) and Savings Groups (86% of positions).

Tong Huy Lan, is a 54-year-old, mother of three. Her husband is ill and so the family relies on her to make an income. Through the Community Based Ecotourism Group, Tong Huy Lan established a tourist homestay.

"In a few months, from the income from my homestay I made USD$25-75 per month. I use this money to buy food, medicine, and for my youngest son's study. I felt so happy ... I can get more money for my older years of life."

CBOs and the Savings Groups supported business development and income generation. With training and support, 28 new businesses were established.

The Tuition Class CBOs held 16 tuition classes across the communes, for 251 students. Average class attendance was at 90%, and 90% of students passed their monthly exam. Training for ten teachers was delivered in collaboration with the Department of Education and World Vision, and the Department has now taken over payment of the salary for four teachers.

The project also focussed on improving water, sanitation and hygiene (WASH). Five water filter systems and three bio-digester toilets were installed in tuition centres. This was complimented with WASH education for students.

Non Donal, a teacher, participated in the CBO training. "In the training I learned about analysing the market, marketing, and business plans. After the training I got together with 5 friends to create a business plan for a private English school ... Now, in my school we have around 75 students, with 5 levels. In every month we can earn USD$300–400. I have saved the money for my study in University in Koh Kong and so I can help my parents. My dream has come true that I can support myself for studying in University. It is unbelievable!"

Delivering Goals 3 and 4: Ensuring organisational effectiveness, sustainability and accountability and enhancing learning

Assisi placed a strong focus on building organisational effectiveness, sustainability and accountability this year, and on enhancing our learning. This relates to Assisi itself and to how we work with, and support, our partners.

In collaboration with partners, staff and supporters, Assisi developed a new Strategic Plan – setting the course of the organisation through to 2020. Built on our long history of working on gender equality and women's empowerment; we have now made this the core focus of all we do.

WHAT WE'VE ACHIEVED THIS YEAR

This will enable us to further target resources, build expertise, and maximise impact in an area critical to human rights and sustainable development.

We have developed a Goals and Results Framework that enables us to measure, monitor and evaluate progress against the Strategic Plan, so as to continuously learn and improve our approach.

Assisi is working with partners to develop countries strategies for India and Cambodia. Aligned to our new Strategic Plan, these strategies set out our objectives, rationale and approach for working in each country. They will be finalised in early 2018.

Assisi undertook in-depth evaluations of our three projects across India and Cambodia this year. The evaluations were designed to assess the projects' effectiveness, relevance, efficiency, and appropriateness, and to provide recommendations for improvement. Assisi is now working with partner organisations and communities to implement the recommendations, with many already in place.

This year, Assisi supported our partner organisations to build their capacity in key areas. In Learning from our project evaluations

Cambodia: – The evaluation found that the project has achieved some impressive results. Many Self-Help Groups have continued to function for over five years and new groups continue to form. There have been successes in the establishment of businesses by many poor families, leading to increases in their household income. Tuition classes have enabled poor students who cannot access government schools to receive an education.

Recommendations for project strengthening included providing Saving Federations with more support in order to take on the role as financial advisors for the savings clubs; seeking community contributions to tuition classes; strengthening the WASH component; reviewing and expanding training of CBOs; and strengthening project indicators.

India: For the Women's Project, the evaluation found that the project has been successful at improving financial stability and independence for women. Women had an improved knowledge of their rights, health, hygiene and child rearing. There had also been significant improvements to women's self esteem, confidence, and community connectedness.

For the Children's Project, the evaluation found that the project has helped disadvantaged children to improve performance in school and their learning outcomes. School pass rates of the participants have increased considerably.

For the Women's Project, a greater focus on strengthening the VDCs and engaging men was recommended. For both projects, a move to longer term planning was recommended. Furthermore, it was recommended that projects be informed by a more detailed problem analysis, to focus on the underlying causes of community issues.

India, staff were trained on child rights, child protection, disability inclusion, disaster risk reduction, gender equality, domestic violence, and reporting and management. In Cambodia, staff undertook gender equality training.

Assisi focused on broadening our fundraising base this financial year. We continued to receive vital funding support from Australian community members and the Department of Foreign Affairs and Trade. We were successful in being awarded grants from the Morris Foundation for our work in Cambodia. We also received a three-year grant from Navitas, which will enable us to expand our work in India to additional villages from 2017/18.

This financial year, Assisi also reviewed and updated its operational and program management policies and procedures, ensuring our approach aligns with best practice in the sector and remains fit for purpose for a small organisation.

Bequests: leaving a legacy

Assisi from time to time receives bequests that help us make a difference in the countries we work.

Assisi relies on the generosity of the Australian public to enable us to continue working to strengthen people's own capacity to build prosperous lives. Our funding comes from a community donations, fundraising and bequests. We also receive an annual allocation from the Australian Government which is linked to the amount we receive from Australian donors.

Bequests enable Assisi to support 'on-the-ground' projects, and open the possibility of expanding our work internationally.

By including Assisi in your Will, it is possible to leave a legacy to ensure that people in need will continue to receive the vital services that Assisi provides. Leaving a bequest to Assisi is the ultimate expression of compassion for the disadvantaged. Please contact Assisi for more information.
